ESG – increasingly embraced by Asia’s wealthy

- What is ESG investing and how has it evolved across the globe?
- Are Asia’s private clients jumping increasingly on the ESG express?
- What impact is ESG investing having on Asia’s private wealth market today?
- How can Asia’s private clients access ESG investments – by individual stock, through funds, ETFs, DPM mandates, or how?
- Does ESG investing only improve the conscience, or the investment returns as well?
- Who measures the ESG criteria, are there viable ESG metrics and ratings, and who is providing them?
- What ESG indices are out in the market, who provides them?
- Looking at the investment and impact objectives across the spectrum of responsible capital: SRI, ESG, Sustainable, Impact investing and Philanthropy.
- Impact case = Investment case?
- Can Impact investing deliver market beating returns in the long run?
- Does ESG cover only the world of equities or fixed income/debt as well?
- Is Asia’s wealth management community rising to the challenge of promoting ETF investing?
- What about the regulators in Asia, are they helping or hindering this initiative?
